Part II Reading Comprehension (40 points, 2 points each)

Direction: In this part there are four passages, each followed by 5 questions. After each question, there are four choices marked A, B, C and D. Choose the best answer to each question.

Passage 1

A new scheme for getting children to and from school is being started by the education authorities in part of Eastern England. This could end the worries of many parents fearful for their children's safety on the roads.

Until now the Country Council has only been prepared to provide bus services for children living more than three miles from their school, or sometimes less if special reasons existed. Now it has been decided that if a group of parents ask for help in organizing transport they will be prepared to go ahead, provided the arrangement will not lose money and that children taking part will be attending their nearest school.

The new scheme is to be tried out this term for children living at Milton who attend Impington school. The children live just within the three-mile limit and the Council has said in the past it will not undertake to provide free transport to the school. But now they have agreed to organize a bus service from Milton to Impington and back, a plan which has the support of the school's headmaster.

Between 50 and 60 parents have said they would like their children to take part. Final calculations have still to be carried out, but a council official has said the cost to parents should be less than £ 6.50 a term.

They have been able to arrange the service at a low cost because there is already an agreement with the bus company for a bus to take children who live further away to Impington. The same bus would now just make an extra journey to pick up the Milton children. The official said they would get in touch with other groups of parents who in the past had asked if transport could be provided for their children to see if they would like to take part in the new scheme.

21. The children the Council ran buses for in the past were those _____.
- A. whose parents were worried about them
 B. who would have had to walk otherwise
 C. who could not walk
 D. who had to travel a long way
22. Taking part in the Council's trial scheme are children who _____.

- A. live in Milton and go to Impington school
 - B. live in Impington and go to Milton school
 - C. live in Milton and go to Milton school
 - D. live in Impington and go to Impington school
23. The new bus service will run _____.
A. on morning journeys to school only
B. in connection with an existing service
C. only for children living more than three miles away
D. only in wet weather
24. Agreement to pay for the new bus service has been obtained from _____.
A. the school's headmaster B. the education department
C. the bus company D. the parents
25. The parents the Council is now going to contact are those _____.
A. who had not yet answered letters B. who didn't want to pay
C. whose children stayed away from school D. who had asked about transport before

Passage2

Upon reaching an appropriate age (usually between 18 and 21 years), children are encouraged, but not forced, to "leave the nest" and begin an independent life. After children leave home they often find social relationship and financial support outside the family. Parents do not arrange marriages for their children, nor do children usually ask permission of their parents to get married. Romantic love is most often the basis for marriage in the United States; young adults meet their future spouses through other friends, at jobs, and in organizations and religious institutions. Although children choose their own spouses, they still hope their parents will approve of their choices.

In many families, parents feel that children should make major life decisions by themselves. A parent may try to influence a child to follow a particular profession but the child is free to choose another career. Sometimes children do precisely the opposite of what their parents wish in order to assert their independence. A son may deliberately decide not to go into his father's business because of a fear that he will lose his autonomy in his father's workplace. This independence from parents is not an indication that parents and children do not love each other. Strong love between parents and children is universal and this is no exception in the American family. Coexisting with such love in the American family are cultural values of self-reliance and independence.

26. The writer discusses the marriage of young adults in order to show which of the following?

- A. They enjoy the freedom of choosing their spouses.
- B. They want to win the permission of their parents.
- C. They have a strong desire to become independent.
- D. They want to challenge the authority of their parents.

27. Most young adults in the U.S. get married for the sake of _____.
A. love
B. financial concern
