Section I Use of English (10 points)

Directions: Reading the following text. Choose the best word(s) for each numbered blank A, B, C, or D, on ANSWER SHEET 1.

Around the world more and more people are taking part in dangerous sports and activities. Of course, there have always been people who have looked for adventure — those who have climbed the highest mountains, ___1___ unknown parts of the world or sailed in small boats across the greatest oceans. Now, however, there are people who ___2___ an immediate excitement from a ___3___ activity which may only ___4___ a few minutes or even ___5___.

I would ___6___ bungee jumping to be a good example of such an activity. You jump from a high place (perhaps a bridge or a hot-air balloon) 200 meters ___7___ the ground with an elastic rope ___8___ to your ankles. You fall at ___9___ to 150 kilometers an hour ___10___ the rope stops you from hitting the ground. It is ___11___ that two million people around the world have now tried bungee jumping. Other activities which most people would say are as risky as bungee jumping involve jumping from tall buildings and ___12___ into the sea from the top of high ___13___.

Why do people take part in such ___14___ as these? Some psychologists suggest that it is because life in modern societies has become safe and ___15___. Not very long ago, people's lives were constantly ___16___ threat. They had to ___17___ for food, diseases could not easily be cured, and life was a battle for ___18___. Nowadays, life offers little excitement. People live and work in comparatively safe environment; they buy food in shops, and doctors and hospitals look after them if they become ill. The answer ___19___ some of these people is to seek ___20___ in activities such as bungee jumping.

Section II Reading Comprehension (60 points)

Part A (40 points)

Directions: Reading the following texts. Answer the questions below each text by choosing A, B, C, or D. Mark your answer on ANSWER SHEET 1.

Is Australian cultural and Intellectual life comparable in quality to that in other Western countries? Unfortunately it is difficult to avoid a negative answer to this question. In cultural terms, it seems as if there is something that has been steadily declining in Australia over the past forty years.

Australians of the 1960s generally comported (表现) themselves better, were ore self-disciplined and were more inclined to respect traditional values than is the case today. A key element of change was the Vietnam War. Opposition to that War was steadily spread more generally amongst the community. Old blue jeans and personal untidiness became its visual norm. An accompanying factor has been the mass culture represented by television, in which attempts to entertain have been at the expense of basic values.

The newspapers of a country reflect its values more clearly than perhaps any other single indicium (标记), and the Australian newspapers — particularly the broadsheet papers purporting (声称) to represent a quality press — show clearly the drop in standards that has occurred. The parlous (危险的) cultural and social position in Australia is demonstrated, not only by the complete absence here of quality newspapers, but also by the inadequate range of books that are published. National Observer publishes book reviews, but it has become increasingly difficult to find Australian books of sufficient quality for this purpose. A number of Australian biographies have been reviewed, and occasional and rare works by quality writers. But in general serious Australian publications are little better than those of Donald Home or Robert Manne, which resemble cartoons of learning or instruction.

Accordingly the book reviews published by National Observer deal increasingly with foreign publications, from which examples are readily found that demonstrate greater maturity, accuracy and balance than Australian works. This fact is not stated with pleasure. It is indeed a grave adverse reflection on Australia.

Some time in the 1960's Australia changed direction. Before, a generation that had undergone the disciplines of a depression and of a world war had maintained a set of cultural values which, if continued, would have sustained a reasonable and indeed admirable nation.

21. The word "something" (Line 3, Para.1) probably means .
 A) Intellectual B) cultural tradition C) cultural projects D) social conformation
22. Australians became _____ in the 1960s.
 A) high-headed B) rigid C) religious D) loose
